

Do I need to inform school if my child is self-isolating or has tested positive, even if they are home learning?

Yes, the DfE have asked schools to provide daily statistics to support the government's response to the coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak.

We therefore need parents to contact school to inform us if their child is self isolating due to being a known contact of a positive case, or if their child is having to self isolate due to testing positive themselves, even if their child has not been in school and is home learning.
