My child is really upset about missing their friends. What can we do?

While we like to think children come to school to learn, they obviously come to play with their friends. It is natural, and quite a good thing, that they are missing their friends.

Living in a digital age they can now easily keep in touch – supervise some facetime and Zoom etc., make phones calls, gets friends to do the same activities separately and talk about it afterwards, like adults are doing; hold a virtual party or event. Use the opportunities we can – we can from Monday 1st June meet outdoors with up to 5 other people
